

Episode Ten – Delia video diary Transcript

I'm so glad that's over! I was really nervous, but the other guys said you couldn't tell, which is good. I have been practising all week, because I was really worried about messing up and letting the others down. And erm...Muzz helped me make some prompt cards which was great 'cause actually I didn't end up looking at them, but it's just having the security of having them there, just in case you need to.

I'm definitely gonna put something in my evaluation about nerves and overcoming them, because it's been a really big problem for me. But it's been really valuable doing this because, when I graduate I plan to look for jobs where you're probably gonna need to do things like presentations, so I'm glad that I did it, even if I was really nervous about doing it.

The whole project has been an awful lot of work, especially considering it doesn't count for an awful lot of the module, and I've heard quite a few people complaining about that; but I think it's been worthwhile 'cause we've all got something out of it. Well, I say all of us: not Liam; because Shireen told him to get lost when he turned up today! And if I have to mark him, he's definitely getting a big fat zero.

To be honest, I'm a little bit worried about marking the rest of them, but I worry a lot, so it'll probably be okay. I think I'm probably gonna give everyone a four overall, because in a round about sort of way, we've all put in about the same amount of work. Even though Rob didn't take on any of the big tasks, I don't think that's totally his fault, because Shireen and Vikki wouldn't let him. In Shireen's case, I think that's because she's got really high standards, so she just wants to make sure everything's up to scratch, and Vikki feels that she has to volunteer for things otherwise they won't get done. Those two didn't get on too well actually, but they didn't let it hinder the process, which is good.

Actually, the group did split a little bit. There was like me Muzz and Vikki, who got on really well, and then Rob and Shireen ended up being quite pally too, but I guess that's just what happens with group work.
