

What we mean by "oral communication"

Many assessments in higher education are conducted using the written word. However, there are also many HE learning, teaching and assessment activities that involve oral communication. These include seminar and small group discussions, group and individual oral presentations, project and dissertation vivas. You may also be involved in more specialist ones such as mock interviews, moots and role plays. You will find resources to help you develop the skills relating to seminars and presentations here.